Housing Development Internship Program

September 2022—June 2023

HDC is currently seeking intern candidates for the 2022 – 2023 Housing Development Internship Program (HDIP). HDIP is a 9 month, part-time, paid internship for students of color designed to recruit, train, and retain racially diverse leaders in the affordable housing sector.

During the program, interns will be actively involved in affordable housing and real estate development. Interns will learn hands-on what it takes to create affordable and healthy living communities, and specifically learn about the intricacies of developing projects from concept inception to construction completion.

Interns will further develop their professional and leadership skills through supplemental activities on at least a monthly basis, as part of a cohort learning community. Cohort convenings will include specific affordable housing curriculum, as well as space for discussion associated with HDC. All interns are expected to achieve basic competency skills in line with their development track over the course of the year.

Who should apply?

- Students of color studying real estate development, urban planning, design and/or related subject matter/field.
- HDI Program acceptance will prioritize candidates entering the last year of their program

Program specifics:

- Interns will commit to an agenda of work and learning consisting of 15 to 20 hours per week for 9-months.
- Pay ranges from $15 to $20 per hour, as determined by an intern's placement agency
- Selected interns will begin the program with a mandatory orientation and training September 13—15th and host agency placement by October 3rd, 2022.

Applications must be submitted by July 15th, 2022.
